PRESS RELEASE

VALLETTA, Malta, 16th April 2024

Hundreds of Maltese children take part in Biennale

Hundreds of Maltese children attended activities organised by Heritage Malta as part of the maltabiennale.art which started last month. There were no less than ten different activities over the past few days which were all fully booked.

In fulfilling its aim to leave an artistic legacy and expose the upcoming generations to contemporary art, maltabiennale.art includes several workshops intended specifically for local children and students.

Some of these workshops open to school children were set in prominent locations such as the Grand Master's Palace and the National Library in Valletta. While providing an interactive experience to students, all such activities were inspired by the theme of the matri-archive focusing on socially sensitive topics like femininity, untold stories of women and their effect on breeding resilience, and cultural heritage.

Other workshops open to Heritage Malta Student Passport holders were held in Fort Saint Elmo, Muza, Mnajdra and Ħaġar Qim temples, were also fully attended. Young participants enjoyed a unique experience to meet and discuss with artists and curators who are taking centre stage in the maltabiennale.art.

The programme also included specialised workshops intended for children with down syndrome and others on the autism spectrum whilst other activities catered specifically for children with a hearing impediment. Students of the Malta School of Art also participated in workshops designed for them.

maltabiennale.art is committed to leave an artistic legacy by investing in upcoming generations, exposing them to contemporary art.

The event which was recently praised by international media and critics is designed to place Malta on the global artistic map thereby supporting the internationalisation of local artists.
